

Testimonials for Boswellia carteri Boswellic Acid Extract with Solvent who tested it for me in a simple lotion or infused in carrier oil

I just want to say the BA cream that you sent me was fantastic! I get these red spots and rashes on and off in random places and can't seem to get rid of them. I tried the cream you sent me and wow it worked fast. I woke up in the am and there was a red splotches on my neck/ chest area applied some of the cream and wala it was gone in like 5 minutes and stayed gone. I now use it on other places those pesky little red splotches show up!

Thank you

Penny S.

After

I started applying the oil/lotion every day on these spots beginning 11/27 in the mornings

Left torso - lotion applied daily

Side of neck - oil applied

Upper back - lotion applied daily

Mid back - lotion applied daily

A week later Upper back - as you can see this one is starting to heal. It's not as red and it's flatter.

1 week later Torso - lesions are almost flat by now. They did crust and peel a little, but they are almost healed here.

Upper back is almost completely healed and barely discolored. The large lesion on my back is only barely raised at this point. And that one was huge initially.

2 weeks later Upper back is basically healed with just a small scar.

So I would summarize by saying that the raised growths got smaller in size. They had been itchy for months and that subsided as well. The discoloration did not go away, but that isn't as big of a deal.

For my face, I think I did see a reduction in depth of the lines. Now that's only 3 weeks with the face, which is a pretty short time but still I think there's a visible difference.

The "growth" (it's not really a growth, but it's not really a mole either), seems to me to be lighter in color than when I started using the cream. I'm sending you a picture, which is the "before" picture. When I took "after" pictures, it looks exactly the same, maybe a bit darker, but in "real life" it seems to be improving. However the pictures do not show this at all. It may be the camera angle, the light, the fact that I'm in a awkward position taking the pic (as it is just above my right ankle). I'm going to keep on using the cream because this is something that I've had for several years and it's not going to go away in a couple of months. Since I personally feel it's helping (even if the pics don't "prove" it), I'll keep using it and I'll let you know when or if it fades or gets a bit smoother. The first pic is "before". The second pic is current. I'll keep you posted and if it fades more I'll let you know.

Using the BA Extract powder in a lotion

The cream was applied as instructed to the forehead where the hard bump is located under the skin. The hard bump can be felt when pressure is gently applied to the skin. There is a minor noticeable change when the bump is rubbed. It does not feel as hard. There is no visible change from looking at the forehead, the change can be only felt through touch. Going forward I will continue to use cream 2x a day until no cream remains. Perhaps by using the cream over an extended period the bump may evidently go away.

Using the BA Extract Powder in a carrier oil

The oil was applied as instructed to the scar on the right shoulder. Prior to applying the oil, the scar was always itchy and very bumpy. With the first application of the oil, the itchiness immediately went away. What a relief. Upon continuous use I noticed the scar bumpiness or lumps felt smoother. The scar has begun to lighten up and doesn't look so unsightly.

Going forward I will continue to use oil 2x a day until the bottle is empty. The scar will never go away since it was created due to surgery; however, no itching feels great and it does not look as unsightly as before. Perhaps I will go sleeveless this summer.

I am also using it for a small mole on the back of my head that hurts. I put the serum on it and after a few days it stopped hurting and I am noticing it is getting smaller and lighter in color. I will continue to use it.

I applied 1 drop of the infusion to each circled area once a day. After 7 day I did not notice any change in the color of the pigmentation. However, the skin texture had improved and felt really soft and I had no adverse reaction to the infusion.

Week 2

I increased the application to twice daily as recommended, still using 1 drop for each area. The infusion absorbs pretty quick into the skin and does not leave a greasy feeling on the skin. By the end of week 2 I could notice a slight change in color. The spots were slightly lighter in color.

Week 3

The second set of pictures is from week 3 (taken today, Jan 3rd). I have not had any adverse reactions to the infusion and as you can see in the pictures the spots are still there but appear visibly lighter. The skin feels nice and soft. I will take another set of pictures by the end of next week and send them to you to see if there is any change from today.

I exclusively applied the BA to a dark red rash on my forearm once a day for a period of one week. I applied a small amount with a qtip in the early evening before I went to bed. I experienced no adverse reaction to it. In the second week I increased the BA application to 2 weeks. No adverse reaction occurred with the increased application. At the end of 3 weeks the deep red discoloration of the rash significantly became lighter

I had this nasty skin tag on my thigh and it was getting worse because it was rubbing. I put the Boswellic acid extract in jojoba oil and after one week it looked like the second picture and after 3wks it looked like the 3rd picture. I cannot give you another picture because it is completely gone. I also had a cyst in the back of my head. I get these when I change shampoo and if it does not like me I get a reaction. I put the same serum on it and 2 days later it was gone.

This was using the Boswellic Acid Extract 70% in a simple lotion

She got these cuts after working around the house

I am putting each one separate but it happened all at once. She used the lotion for two weeks 3x a day and these are the results. Her name was Rachel.
